Acute pancreatitis is a sudden inflammation of the pancreas, a small organ that helps with digestion. It is most often linked to gallstones which accounts for around half of all cases. Alcohol consumption which accounts for about a quarter of all cases.

Detailed Reviewer's Report

- 1. Acute fatty liver of pregnancy is a rare but serious condition that occurs when too much fat builds up in the liver during pregnancy. It is an obstetric emergency that can lead to liver failure and other life threatening complications.

REVIEWER'S REPORT

- 2. An atypical presentation refers to a clinical scenario where a disease or condition manifests with symptoms or signs that differ from the typical or expected presentation.
- 3. Multiorgan failure also known as multiple organ dysfunction syndrome. Is a serious condition where two or more organ system are failing.
- 4. It can occur after an injury, infection or other illness.
- 5. Complicated by multiorgan failure means that a medical condition has become more severe and life threatening due to the simultaneous failure of multiple organs in the body.
- 6. Often resulting from a systemic inflammatory response triggered by a severe injury, infection, . Essentially the primary condition has progressed to a point where several organ systems are no longer functioning properly, significantly impacting the patients survival.
- 7. Actually this research findings are medicinally very valued one . But here Informations are given very less.
- 8. There is no key words. Must be given.
- 9. In results there is no tables and graphs separately. Only given theoretical points. Summary parts also missed.
- 10. References are very very less. Should be in alphabetical order.
- 11. Must be included more review points with references.
- 12. After that value to publish in our journal.
